Dear Mr Jennens

I thank you very sincerely for your kind consideration in not liking to inspire me with hopes which might not be realized. I trust, however, that they will be.

The lady mentioned by my Brother, as having given trouble to the family, was no relation of Rawlins but the widow of my Uncle Captain Jennings. She was the daughter of a Clergyman, named Peacock. I think your Mother knew something of the family. It appears to me strange that there can be any doubt whether a relation of Rawlins's or myself is the legal claimant.

He had no property whatever, it all belonged to my Mother.

Her second marriage was most unhappy. She was separated from Rawlings long before her death.

My Brothers and myself never lived with them. But always with my Grandmother, who disapproved of the marriage. Give my love to your wife

Believe me to remain Yours very sincerely
